Viking Voyage

Fattened raindrops peppered the first-floor window like tin and Charlie Hocker that the freshness of spring was still as

At ground level beneath them was Hackers' Antiques. On the icy winter weather pushed York's shoppers straight past barely a second glance. Most had their faces protected against hoods; others shielded relentless downpour by umbrellas. It seemed as if for a browse today.

None of this mattered, siblings in the lounge, warm and crackling fire at bay, bathing them hot and heat as they sat across on the floor.

The pink tip of ten-year-old looked like it was trying to a mouth as he focused on scrub bits of dirt from his goalkeeper.

"Do you have to do that in eventually asked. "There's muck e

Charlie scrunched up his face. "I to do it at all but Mum says they need cleaning before the next match a doing them outside in this weather."

Tilda's freckled nose wrinkled as she sighed. "Well, you could try and be mo about it. You're flicking dirt all over my stitching. I want to get this finish and I don't want it ruined before it's even done."

Charlie peered down at the handmade item nestled on his eleven-year-old knee. Several days ago, he'd watched Tilda use a paper pattern to cut shapes
